FLICKERTALE

VOLUME 45 · NUMBER 9 · SEPTEMBER 2015

2015 Summer Summit Summary

The 2015 Summer Summit was a day-long continuing education opportunity for library leaders and administrators. The meeting was broken into four presentations which incorporated small group discussions and active Q&A participation. The topics covered were community engagement and the Aspen Institute's report Rising to the Challenge: Re-Envisioning Public Libraries, community partnerships, open records and open meetings laws, and project management using the free online collaboration tool Trello. Summit meetings were held at the Grand Forks Public Library, West Fargo Public Library, Alfred Dickey Public Library in Jamestown, the North Dakota State Library, and the Minot Public Library. Seventy-three librarians from 52 distinct institutions attended this year, making it our best attended Summer Summit to date. School, public, academic, and special libraries were all represented.

Response to our sessions was enthusiastic, both in person and on our evaluative survey, with comments running the gamut from "I thought it was an exceptionally well-run session [...] and I was engaged with the material the whole time" to "you rocked my world!" As always, this was a learning opportunity for us as well as for our attendees. We will take all the feedback we've received to heart so that we can make future continuing education opportunities even more successful.

News and Thoughts...

from Mary J. Soucie, State Librarian

It seems like the school year starts earlier every year. When I was a kid, we started school the Tuesday after Labor Day and got out the second week of June. This year, I saw the “first day of schools” hit my Facebook newsfeed the second week of August. Wowza that seems early to me!

As August turned to September, it seemed like the days got hotter and so the kids should be in the pool or running through the sprinkler rather than putting on a school uniform. It brings to mind my first year in North Dakota, when it seemed so weird to send the kids to bed before the sun completely set as their school year was ending.

It seems like time flies more and more quickly these days. I feel like I blinked and it was the end of the summer. Important things happened at NDSL this summer that maybe you missed because the time flew by. The State Library had its first ever Adult Summer Reading program. We had a Bingo card with a variety of squares on it, all designed to help the reader become more familiar with a service or collection at the State Library. Squares included read a book by a ND author, use Digital Horizons, get your NDSL library card, and use Novelist to find your next book, among other things. We were excited to offer a summer reading program. We had a fair number of participants and look forward to increasing this next summer.

Another thing that happened this summer was the kickoff of our “Universal Class” subscription for public libraries. Universal Class is an online resource that has over 500 self paced classes, on every topic from scrapbooking and cooking to the ABCs of Algebra to Office 2010. Please encourage your patrons to access this rich resource. Contact the State Library if you have questions about Universal Class.

The State Library once again had a table at the ND State Fair. It is a great opportunity for us to promote libraries in ND and the services and resources that they offer. We answer reference questions, showcase some of the online resources and try to connect people with their local library.

The Summer Summit was once again held in 5 locations around the state. We had great turnout from all types of libraries. This year’s format was a combination of lectures and interactive networking. We’ve received positive feedback from attendees. I did a presentation on the Aspen Report, Rising to the Challenge; Re-envisioning Public Libraries. All attendees received a copy of the report, which has 3 different action lists: for library leaders, the community and policy makers. We have some copies of the report remaining and would love to share it with you. Please contact me if you’re interested; remaining books will be distributed on a first come, first serve basis.

This summer, we resumed the Librarian for a Day visits. I am thoroughly enjoying getting out to our libraries and seeing firsthand, the accomplishments and challenges that our libraries and library staff are facing. If you’d like to schedule me for a visit, please contact Kristin Byram at NDSL for more information.

As the summer slowly eases into fall, I am hoping that fall sticks around a little bit longer than summer did. I am looking forward to cool nights around a campfire at my brother’s house, snuggled beneath a blanket while someone roasts a marshmallow for me. In the winter, I’ll enjoy curling up with a book and a cup of hot tea but it’s not time for that yet.

ONLINE LIBRARY RESOURCE

Britannica School

Britannica School is an online learning resource designed for grades K-12. Students and teachers can easily search, filter, save, and share content. Automatic citation styles are included: MLA, APA, Harvard, and Chicago; just copy and paste into your Works Cited page. Researchers can access Britannica School anytime and with any device that has a web browser.

There are three learning levels with user-friendly interfaces: Elementary, Middle, and High School. Each learning level features a screen reader and a font size changer helpful for students with special needs. Double-click any article word for a Merriam Webster definition and pronunciation. You can also translate articles into one of 50 languages.

Britannica School supports Differentiated Learning. Content and interface work together to give the user an experience tailored to their needs. Each article allows you to choose a different reading level. Struggling readers are often reluctant to move to a lower reading level because the interface and experience are designed for younger students. For example, middle and high school students stay in their more advanced interfaces, even if they choose the elementary reading level.

Accurate up-to-date content is aligned to Common Core State Standards and covers a wide range of subjects written by educational experts. Content includes articles (from encyclopedias, magazines, and journals), biographies, images and videos, interactive lessons, activities, and learning games. Students can also find educator-approved websites related to search topics. Britannica's editorial team updates content daily with new and revised articles.

There are resources for teachers that promote reading skills, vocabulary, research, and critical thinking. Use the research aids to build information literacy skills. Teachers can adapt ready-made lesson plans on many subjects or create their own with the Lesson Plan Builder.

Britannica School is a student-friendly learning resource, which School Library Journal listed as one of the 10 Best Digital Resources, 2014. The Online Library Resources available through the State Library are a great place for students to begin research for papers and projects. Parents and teachers can rest assured that these databases are evaluated for quality and are appropriate for students of all ages. Contact your school librarian or call the State Library at 1-800-472-2104 for more details. Take advantage of these free educational tools and make learning more fun.

Select learning for any level.

The screenshot shows a navigation bar with three buttons labeled "Elementary", "Middle", and "High", each accompanied by a tree icon of increasing size. Below the "Elementary" button is a search box with the text "Search" and a magnifying glass icon. Below the search box is a list of three bullet points:

- Look for people, places, and things.
- Watch and learn with videos and animations.
- Have fun with games and activities.

National Book Festival

This year the State Library had two staff members, Dave Anderson and Shari Mosser travel to the National Book Festival in Washington D.C. They were also accompanied by Elgin Library Board President, Kelly Hoffman. They all worked the North Dakota State Booth. Here are their accounts from the trip:

“We started out at the Bismarck airport very early Friday morning (3:30 am) and flew to DC by way of Minneapolis. Having never been to DC, I was amazed to the size of everything. When we left the airport we rode the Metro which was another new experience and kind of fun.

Saturday was the book fair. It was quite fun and you wouldn't imagine the amount of people that came through. I think it must have been several hundred thousand without exaggeration. All the kids had maps for us to stamp and we gave out cups that said “I read past my bedtime” and pins that said “I'm in love with a fictional character”. Both the cups and pins were big hits with young and old alike. By closing time I was exhausted. So we went back to our hotel for dinner.

Sunday was back to the airport for the return flight home and then some much needed catch up sleep. All in all I think a good time was had by all. I would definitely recommend the trip to anyone who might think about signing up to go along next year.”

Kelly Hoffman—Elgin volunteer and President of the library board

“Attending the National Book Festival in Washington DC is one of those experiences that anyone interested in books and reading should add to their bucket list. I am not sure that a person could find a festival anywhere in the country that brings together 150 nationally known authors and over 100,000 festival attendees. You will find book lovers of all ages who are so excited to be a part of this event, and just as excited to share their favorite authors and titles. The Pavilion of States, where I had the privilege to spend most of my day, is a pavilion dedicated to children's books and authors from every state. It is fun to watch the kids and their parents as they interact with each other. The kids are given a map of the United States and they go around to each booth and have their map stamped by a representative from each state. It is very interesting visiting with the children and parents and to hear what knowledge they have of our state. An often heard comment was, “oh this is the state that has all of the oil.” Some of the children are very knowledgeable about the states. Many parents use this event as an educational experience for their children and challenge them to not only find each state on the map, but name each state capitol. I feel very fortunate to have had the opportunity to attend the National Book Festival, and to be a part of such a wonderful event.”

Dave Anderson - North Dakota State Library

“Kelly Hoffman, Dave Anderson, and I recently attended the 15th Library of Congress National Book Festival at the Washington DC Convention Center. The festival's theme was “I Cannot Live Without Books” and featured more than 170 authors, poets, illustrators and special presenters. We celebrated reading and talked to many people about the literary heritage of our state. We also gave out some fun cups that encouraged reading past bedtime and buttons proclaiming “I'm in love with a fictional character”!

I did miss the book signings, author talks and panel discussions, but I got to participate in many of the children's events! I would whole heartedly encourage everyone to attend the National Book Festival. It is free and an amazing experience!”

E-rate: the Funding Commitment Decision Letter

Submitted by Al Peterson

For those participating in E-rate, you should have been through the Program Integrity Review, submitted your answers to the reviewer's questions, and now you have received your Funding Commitment Decision Letter (FCDL). After you receive your FCDL, you can start the preparations to begin receiving discounted services. You should discuss with your service provider(s) any details involved in the provision of services and invoicing for those services. Once services have started, you should be ready to file the FCC Form 486. After you have received your Funding Commitment Decision Letter (FCDL) and the delivery of your services has started, you file an FCC Form 486 to inform USAC that:

- Services for which you have been approved for discounts have started and invoicing can begin,
- Your technology plan (you are required to have one if applying for Priority Two category of services) has been approved by a USAC-certified Technology Plan Approver,
- You are in compliance with the Children's Internet Protection Act (CIPA) (or CIPA does not apply because your application is only for telecommunications services and/or interconnected Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) services).

REMEMBER: THE FUNDING COMMITMENT DECISION LETTER IS NOT THE END OF THE PROCESS!

The FCC Form 486 must be certified no later than 120 days after the Service Start Date or 120 days after the date of the FCDL, whichever is later. This certification date can be found within your FDCL notice. Look for the phrase, "Last Allowable Date for Delivery and Installation for Non-Recurring Services: (ex) 10/28/2015." With the new changes being made with the E-rate program by the FCC, only one extension may be filed before the 120 day deadline. Al's advice: get the Form 486 filed sooner rather than later.

After USAC has processed your FCC Form 486, you will receive a Form 486 Notification Letter. Now, you or your service provider can invoice USAC for the discount share of those services. There are two methods that can be used:

Invoice Method #1

Applicants file FCC Form 472, the Billed Entity Applicant Reimbursement (BEAR) Form, if they have paid the service provider in full for the services and want to be reimbursed for the discount amount.

The service provider must approve the form before it is submitted to USAC. USAC will review the invoice and process a payment to the service provider if payment is approved. The service provider then passes the reimbursement on to the applicant.

Invoice Method #2

Service providers file FCC Form 474, the Service Provider Invoice (SPI) Form, if they have provided discounted bills to their customer and want to be reimbursed for the discount amount.

Under both invoice methods, USAC will review the invoice and process a payment to the service provider if payment is approved. Note that applicants are required to pay the non-discount portion of the cost of the services.

If you have any questions about E-rate, feel free to contact me at 701-328-4021 or alpeterson@nd.gov.

Summer Food Service Programs at North Dakota Libraries

During the school year, many children receive free lunches at school. When school lets out for the summer, that often means kids go hungry. That's where the USDA Summer Food Service Program (SFSP) steps in. During the summer, any child age 0-18 can eat lunch at an SFSP site. Public libraries make ideal sites, since they are natural gathering places for children during summer reading programs! As a meal service site, libraries do not prepare the food, they simply offer a place for children to eat.

This year, two North Dakota libraries were involved in the SFSP. The Grand Forks Public Library SFSP site was sponsored by the St. Joseph's Social Care and Thrift Store. They served lunch Monday through Friday for eight weeks. The Grand Forks Public Library has participated as an SFSP site for two years. The Morton Mandan Public Library participated as a site for the first time this year. Lunch was served in Dykshoorn Park Monday through Friday for nine weeks.

Linda Austin, Children's Program Coordinator at the Morton Mandan Public Library, also organized 34 programs to tie into this year's summer reading theme. "Lunch with Heroes" featured different heroes from the community, and included the fire department, police department, National Guard, nurses, doctors, Humane Society, musicians, crafters, gymnasts, and many more. Heroes provided a short program that highlighted their role in the community. On average, 77 children attended each program. First Lady Betsy Dalrymple also participated by reading to the children and giving away books provided by the United Way.

To learn more about getting involved in the SFSP in North Dakota, visit the Department of Public Instruction's Child Nutrition & Food Distribution website. We would love to see more North Dakota libraries participate!

North Dakota Library Coordinating Council Corner

Submitted by Mary Soucie, State Librarian

The ND Library Coordinating Council met August 3 at the Grand Forks Public Library to conduct regular business and on August 4 for site visits. The Council reviewed and approved the applications for the next round of Library Vision 2020 grants, which were announced September 1. Grants are open to publicly funded school, public and academic libraries. The Council also conducted elections; Ted Smith from the Supreme Court Law Library was re-elected as Chair and Stephen Banister from Minot State University was re-elected Vice Chair. The committee renewed its commitment to conducting site visits as part of their quarterly meetings, as long as the agenda and weather allow. Members of the Council will be at the State Library table at the NDLA Conference and also present at the grant pre-conference.

If you have questions about what the Council does or who the current members are, please visit our website at <http://library.nd.gov/coordinatingcouncil.html>. The next meeting of the Library Coordinating Council will be November 2-3 at Trinity Bible College in Ellendale, with site visits to be conducted on the 3rd.

Librarians Like a Bunch of Authors

Michael Crichton	Alice Hoffman	Terry Pratchett	Connie Willis
Chris Crutcher	Craig Johnson	Douglas Preston

Oh, and if you're wondering who showed up on the list most frequently that would, of course, be J.K. Rowling. Harper Lee was a close second and Margaret Atwood, C.J. Box, Patricia Cornwell, John Grisham, Erik Larson, Jodi Picoult, Nora Roberts, Dr. Seuss, and the combination of Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child were the other repeats.

Librarian for the day at Carrington City Library

Submitted by Mary Soucie, State Librarian

On a beautiful fall-like day in August, I headed to Carrington. It was my first time to visit that part of the state. I learned that you really need to stop in Steele when you venture off of I-94, and I had my first experience with a pilot car in road construction.

My first thought upon walking in the door of the library was what a warm and welcoming space I had walked into. I was greeted with a friendly smile by Lenore, the library director, and given a tour. The library was beautifully renovated when they moved in 5 years ago. The building began its life as a grocery store and then a daycare but was empty when the library moved in. In addition to lots of natural light, the library has warm colors, plenty of comfortable seating plus a table that the community uses for different purposes, including putting together puzzles that the library provides. There is a high top table and chairs near the coffee maker; the suggested donation for a cup of coffee, tea, apple cider or hot chocolate is one dollar but patrons are often more generous. I love when libraries look to meet community needs in different ways like providing drinks.

Since the library was a former grocery store, there is plenty of storage, a commodity that many libraries are lacking. There is a separate entrance to the community room in addition to a full kitchen and bathrooms, which gives the library the opportunity to rent out the room. Lenore said they have had everything from baby showers to the ND Water Commission using the space. On the day that I was there, the room was setup for storytime, including a craft and a superhero maze. The room was large enough to have plenty of tables setup with an additional space at the front to place the rug for storytime.

I had the opportunity to chat with Michele and Claudia, the Carrington school librarians, who dropped in during their lunch hour. Michele is the school representative on the North Dakota Library Coordinating Council, but I hadn't had the opportunity to meet Claudia. I also had the opportunity to visit with several patrons. One person, the husband of a very active library patron and a former city council member, hadn't visited the library before and he was very impressed by it. I predict he'll now accompany his wife more often rather than having her check out his books. We also had a lovely conversation with the patron about libraries, censorship, and materials selection.

I was the guest reader for storytime, which is something I really enjoy doing. I've been a guest reader more times as State Librarian than I was as a library director. I also had the opportunity to check books out to patrons after storytime, which was fun. I sometimes miss working the circulation desk, visiting with patrons about what they're reading and just in general, chatting about life. I learned about a local beekeeper, the harm that pesticides can cause to a tree, and talked with a homeschooler.

I also met with members of the library board to talk about strategic planning, mission statements, and vision statements. We talked about a SWOT (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats) analysis and the role it can play in strategic planning and reviewed the community survey results from the prior year.

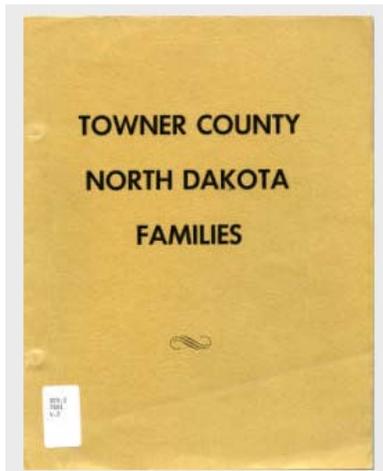

I enjoyed visiting Carrington Library. The idea behind "Librarian for a Day" is to acquaint me with our libraries while providing whatever assistance the librarian needs. I love that each of my visits have been different while still having some similarities. If you're interested in scheduling me at your library, please contact Kristin Byram at kbyram@nd.gov or 701-328-4656.
