

Library Vision Survey

By Mary Soucie, State Librarian

The State Library, in partnership with the North Dakota Library Coordinating Council (NDLCC), is seeking feedback from the library community about Library Vision grants. Please consider completing the survey at <https://forms.office.com/g/5VwExygVg6> even if you have never applied for or received a Library Vision grant. The survey is short and should take fifteen minutes or less to complete.

We are hoping to get feedback on how we can improve the grant process, ideas for future grant opportunities and specifically if the match requirement is prohibitive to libraries that are applying for grants. We are hoping for a broad response to the survey so that we have as much information as possible as we consider changes to the process.

Thank you in advance for taking the time to complete the survey. Our goal is for the Library Vision grant program to be as beneficial as possible to the North Dakota Library Community, and we need your input to meet that goal.

If you have comments outside of the survey questions or would like to have a conversation with me about the Library Vision grants, please email me at msoucie@nd.gov or call me at (701)328-4654 (O) or (701)516-6166 (C). I look forward to receiving the feedback to share with the NDLCC, implementing meaningful changes and offering grant opportunities that meet the needs of the library community.

National Financial Literacy Month

Submitted by Shari Mosser

Welcome to APRIL! And welcome to National Financial Literacy month! Each April, organizations across the nation take part in this initiative to highlight the importance of financial literacy education for all citizens of all ages. Libraries should take this opportunity to help patrons review their finances and gradually improve them.

Money Smart Week 2022 runs from April 9-16. It is 100% virtual! There are four webinars to participate in "Spend Smart. Eat Smart," "Credit : Build & Improve it!," "Buying or Refinancing a Home," and "Understanding Social Security Retirement, Spouse and Survivor Benefits." Go to <https://www.moneysmartweek.org/> to sign up.

After that, go to Jump$tart, a non-profit coalition of organizations that share a commitment to advancing youth financial literacy. The Financial Literacy Month Toolkit is available at <https://www.jumpstart.org/what-we-do/promote-financial-literacy/toolkit/>. It has graphics to help parents worry less about "teaching" their kids about money and focus more on talking about it.

Another place you can turn is the North Dakota chapter of Jump$tart. They have a speaker's bureau of qualified speakers that talk about financial topics. You can contact them at ndjumpstart@gmail.com.

National Poetry Month

Along with being School Library Month, April is also National Poetry Month. Celebrating poetry could fit easily into the celebration of your school library!

History of National Poetry Month

National Poetry Month was established in 1996 by the Academy of Poets. The goals of this celebration include:

- highlighting the extraordinary legacy and ongoing achievement of American poets,
- encouraging the reading of poems,
- assisting teachers in bringing poetry into their classrooms,
- increasing the attention paid to poetry by national and local media,
- encouraging increased publication and distribution of poetry books, and
- encouraging support for poets and poetry (National, n.d.).

The American Library Association (ALA), in collaboration with the FINRA Investor Education Foundation (FINRA Foundation), has released Thinking Money for All Kids: Diverse and Inclusive Reads to Teach Young People about Money, a free resource for library workers.

Available now as a PDF download, the guide highlights 40 recommended titles selected by a team of librarian advisors. The guide was developed to eschew stereotypes and embrace diversity in telling stories and sharing skills related to personal finance and financial capability for children.

“The FINRA Foundation and the American Library Association have worked together for more than 15 years to help public libraries meet the financial education needs of communities across the country,” said Gerri Walsh, president of the FINRA Foundation. “Thinking Money for All Kids: Diverse and Inclusive Reads to Teach Young People about Money is a much-needed guide full of ideas and books to help young people see themselves in stories while gaining the skills to make smart financial choices.”

The guide also includes sections on how to build a diverse financial education collection, program ideas, resources, and tips.

Take a Virtual Field Trip

Submitted by Shari Mosser

Armchair Travels – Many of us have taken trips in our lives. A lovely, warm sandy beach where you meet the love of your life. A castle on a windswept moor where you are trying to find Sir Cumber’s ghost. The surface of Mars where you are going to fix the Opportunity Mars Exploration Rover.

Well, maybe those are just unique to me. I’m used to having my imagination take me on journeys to places I’ve never been. However, sometimes it helps to have something on which to base those journeys. Google Expeditions was a wonderful item to come out because of Covid. I could visit so many different countries and historical places. Unfortunately, the app is no longer available.

However, there is good news! Many (but not all) expeditions can be found on Google Arts and Culture. Google Arts and Culture is a website and an app with virtual tours of art museums around the world, natural habitats, and so much more!

Visit <https://artsandculture.google.com/story/QgUxjvlk7ChgnQ> to view information about virtual field trips to plan where you want to adventure today! Or look at the entire list, organized by subject, at <https://artsandculture.google.com/project/expeditions>.

Personal Finance 101 - How to Manage Your Money & Debt Reduction

Submitted by Al Peterson

Has the rise in inflation and increasing costs of goods and services got you thinking about managing your money better? Check out these two classes from Universal Class for help with straightening your finances for your financial health and peace of mind. These courses can be found under the Finance tab in Universal Class.

Personal Finance 101 - How to Manage your Money will teach the ins and outs of your financial journey, written interestingly as a travel itinerary. This fun, unique presentation breaks down your financial trip into three parts: planning, executing, and traveling. You will learn how to maintain checking and savings accounts, manage debt and credit scores, balance accounts, and build wealth. The goal is to start living your life, generating wealth, retiring debt, and achieving financial freedom.

Debt Reduction goes into more detail on debt by teaching the concept of debt reduction and showing how to manage credit and personal debt. The steps taught in this course help achieve financial freedom and peace of mind. This course will teach you how to recognize debt traps, develop a debt reduction plan, deal with debt management agencies, track a budget, and other valuable topics.

Both of these courses and many more can be found in Universal Class at <https://northdakotastatend.universalclass.com/>.
