The official author list for the National Book Festival is here! Every year, the Library of Congress hosts the National Book in Washington, DC. Thousands of people flock to the convention center for the day, hoping to get a book (or two!) signed by their favorite author. With 50+ sessions, and sometimes two authors at a session, you can see why this festival is the biggest literary event of the year! This year, the festival will be live-streamed, so even if you can't attend in person, you can still participate!

Here are just a few of the sessions from each category that I am most excited about. (And if I don't come home with a signed book by Alan Gratz, I will have one very disappointed son!) For the full list of authors and sessions, visit the Library of Congress website at <https://blogs.loc.gov/bookmarked/2023/06/09/its-here-the-2023-national-book-festival-author-lineup/>.

Lewis-Houghton Civics & Democracy Initiative

Submitted by Lexi Whitehorn

Attention teachers & library media specialists!

As the ND Center for the Book representative, I am excited to share an opportunity for ND libraries! This initiative through the Library of Congress would be a great opportunity to introduce students to primary sources and to provide opportunities for cross-curricular projects.

In the Legislative Branch Appropriations Act, 2023, Congress honored the service of Rep. John R. Lewis (D-GA) and Rep. Amo Houghton (R-NY) by establishing the Lewis-Houghton Civics and Democracy Initiative within the Library's Teaching with Primary Sources program. Through this pilot, the Library will distribute the appropriated funds in the form of grants to organizations to develop digitally enabled learning initiatives for secondary education based on creative arts-driven instruction, especially focused on music, in history, civics and democracy.

For more information, visit <http://blogs.loc.gov/teachers/2023/06/the-lewis-houghton-civics-and-democracy-initiative-opportunities-to-use-creative-arts-to-engage-students/>.

** Please note that this opportunity is an initiative through the Library of Congress and not the ND State Library.
